JOHN F. DOWD QUILTS $3,000 CURLEY WANTS POLLS
AMERICAN OFFICE OPEN UNTIL 8 P. M.

John F. Dowd, director of American for the city, today tendered his resignation to Mayor Curley. The position pays $10,000 a year. Mr. Dowd is a candidate for the City Council from Ward 8 and stated that he would not feel justified in accepting the election of the city council while holding public office, and by vote for the late closing.

FIND WOMAN'S BODY IN PYRE

Winnebago, Ia., Oct. 13 (A.P.)—The fastnesses of the Tennessee Swamp today held the secret of a young white woman's death while armed men combed the swamps for a clue to explain the finding of the charred body on a pine log pyre. Identification of the body found Saturday night by a negro who feared to notify the parish authorities lest he be implicated, was practically impossible. It had been disintegrated by fire and was badly burned. It was found by a negro who said that he had been hunting for the body of a woman who had been killed before or after the woman's death.

Unmarked feminine apparel of good quality, found in a suitcase near the pyre, and a white gold ring on the finger of the corpse were the threads by which identification was hoped to be made.

COUPLE IN AUTO GO INTO CHARLES RIVER

An unidentified couple, narrowly escaped death by drowning at noon today when the automobile in which they were riding left Mount Vernon, New York, and plunged over a 15-foot embankment into the Charles River.

Witnesses told the police that the man jumped from the car just before it hurled into the water. The girl, they said, managed to free herself from the car as it lay half submerged in the water and swam ashore.

She was carried to her home by a passing auto and the driver disappeared before the Metropolitan police arrived. The car is registered under the name of Elmer Clark, 22 Park street, New York.

WEEKS OUT, DAVIS IS WAR SECRETARY

Washington, Oct. 13 (A.P.)—Dwight F. Davis of Missouri today was appointed Secretary of War. He takes the place of John W. Weeks of Massachusetts, whose retirement because of ill health was formally announced at the White House. The change is effective immediately.

An Assistant Secretary, Mr. Davis has been actual head of the War Department since last Spring, when Mr. Weeks was sent to New England by his physicians for an operation and a long vacation.

In his letter of resignation the retiring Cabinet member said it had become apparent that he must greatly prolong this vacation if he is to completely regain his health. President Coolidge replied that he succeeded with great regret to the Secretary's instant request that he be permitted to lay down the official duties he assumed when it Harding administration came into office in 1921.

The new Secretary, a lawyer and business man, is in his forty-seventh year.

RADIO TUNES IN BURGLARY

Brattleboro, Vt., Oct. 13 (A.P.)—Tuning in on a radio at 3 a. m. has its advantages. George W. Clapp did it today, but the sound of an explosion drowned out Los Angeles. He turned out the lights and called the police, but burglars who had blown the safe in the postoffice escaped.

The front door and inner doors of the vault were opened by the use of an acetone flame and the front door of the inner safe was wrecked by nitroglycerine, but, according to Postmaster A. Daniels, it will not be known until tomorrow whether the break yielded any booty, as the wrecked door will not be removed until the arrival of postal officials. Entrance was gained by forcing a rear window.

Burglars obtained about $5,000 worth of stamps on September 8, 1924, when they blew a safe in another part of the office.

MOORE'S HOME RUN WINS STRUGGLE

Pittsburgh, Oct. 13.—Still battling uphill, Bill McKechnie's Pittsburgh Pirates swung murderous cutlasses again today against the Senators from Washington, and evened up the World Series battles at three games all. The "rubber" will be milled and moiled tomorrow.

The final score of today's game was: Pirates, 3; Senators, 2.

Eddie Moore's home run in the fifth inning decided the issue. With the score tied, 2 and 2, the Pirates' second sacker whacked the ball into the left field seats for the deciding tally.

"Goose" Goslin put the Senators away in the lead by smashing out a home run in the first inning with two gone.

The Senators got another in the second, when Peckinpaugh doubled, scoring Bluege. Bluege had forced Judge after the latter singled.

The Pirates tied the score in the third. Moore, first up, walked and when Peckinpaugh failed to touch second on Carey's tap both base runners were safe.

Cuyler advanced both men with a sacrifice and Moore scored on Barnhart's out. Traynor's single scored Carey.

PRIMARIES IN THREE CITIES TODAY

Balloting in Somerville, Cambridge and Lynn Will Eliminate Many Candidates

Municipal primary elections will be held out for the first time today in Massachusetts in Somerville, Lynn and Cambridge.

Somerville is holding a regular primary election in party lines, while Lynn and Cambridge are conducting an elimination vote to select the candidates to be voted for in November. The two latter cities are also adopting for the first time the biennial system.

The primaries in Lynn will result in a battle over the selection of two men from thirteen candidates to run for mayor. The two highest will be voted on in November.

Cambridge has three candidates for two places, and Somerville has a three-cornered fight for the Republican nomination for mayor.

The usual contests for aldermen, city and ward councilors and school committee will also take place. The polls will be open from noon until 5 p. m.

In Somerville, Leon M. Conwell, William J. Bell and Arthur P. Mason are contesting for the Republican nomination for mayor. John A. Murphy is unopposed for the Democratic nomination. The contest for minor offices are all in Republican hands.

$30,000 in Gems Stolen

MADDERN'S AIR PLANE ASSAILED BY PATRICK

Army Aviation Chief Resents Charge of Squandering Funds

Washington, Oct. 13 (A.P.)—Major-General Mason M. Patrick, army air chief, opposed, before the President's air board, today a proposal advanced by Chairman Madden of the House Appropriations Committee to transfer all aircraft experimental work from the army to private enterprise.

General Patrick took exception to Madden's testimony that "millions of dollars" had been "squandered" by the army in "reckless" expenditure of funds for experimental work. Much experimental work, he said, is necessary to show what should not be done.

The attitude of Congress, he continued, has been most "sympathetic," but the degree of results that have been obtained, in aviation development is a "matter of opinion."

AGAIN BACKS MITCHELL
The witness reiterated his advocacy of a Department of National Defense as favored by Colonel William Mitchell, but he doubted if the time is "quite ripe" for such a sweeping change.

Air strength of other nations, including army and navy, was given by General Patrick as:

France, 1,500 planes, with 1,000 in reserve (England, 1,000; Italy, 400; with 200 in reserve; Japan, 80; about one-half obsolete, and the United States army 1,035.

NO NEED FOR U. S. WORRY.
The army chief assured the board there was no need for this nation to worry over fear of invasion from the air.

Postmaster-General New Followed General Patrick on the state and reiterated that a definite, continuing national program was the first need for aviation in the United States. Commercial flying, he said, was the cornerstone of the whole structure. He advocated a bureau of civil aeronautics in the Department of Commerce.

DAWES DECLINES TO MIX IN N. J. POLITICS

Montclair, N. J., Oct. 13 (A.P.)—Vice-President Charles G. Dawes today told three officers of the Young Men's Whittier for Governor Clark he did not come into New Jersey to take part in any partisan fight. He refused to pose seated at a table with the officers, as if in conference.

The officers of the club said that the Vice-President must have misunderstood them, that they desired merely his endorsement of the activity of young men in politics. The Vice-President finally was induced to pose.

Why?

Why Do They Call the Game Tennis?

Homer, master word painter, has Naïade, Princess of Phaeacia, playing a game of ball with her maids of honor, which is said to have been the ancestor of modern tennis, after the usual changes and modifications that inevitably occur through the ages.

From Greece and Rome shortly thereafter a like game was taken into other European countries, and during the Middle Ages we find the royalty, especially the kings of England and France, great players of the game.

In France the players called "Tennis" meaning "take," supposed meaning "take this ball," with great gusto as they awaited the little ball, and it is from that word that the game is supposed to have derived the name of tennis.

"Tennis" meaning "take," supposed meaning "take this ball," with great gusto as they awaited the little ball, and it is from that word that the game is supposed to have derived the name of tennis.

For a time tennis was known in England as "rackets," getting that name through another line of nomenclature, beginning with the Arabian word "raki," which means "palm," and was supposed to apply to a game in which the palm of the hand was used as a bat. "Raki" became "racket" in Italian, "racket" in French and was Anglicized into "racket" or "rackets."

SUN BY DAY THOMPSON'S BACKWARD MISS CURTIS

Therefore She Will Not Forge Ahead Until After the New Year

Mrs. Catherine Howard Thompson, of No. 109 Ashmun road, who claims to have credit the prediction that when the Republican cause into power Senator Harding would be elected President, has drawn up the horoscopes of the candidates in Boston's mayoralty fight.

These horoscopes will be printed from day to day in the Boston Evening American, and a comparison given by Mrs. Thompson, among other successful prophecies, predicted in 1913 the ultimate entry of the United States into the World War.

The horoscope printed today is that of Miss Frances G. Curtis.

MISS FRANCES G. CURTIS
Born Wednesday, January 23, 1887
Boston, Mass.

I must say again, that the very best birthday present that a mother can give her child, is to pay particular attention to the hour of the birth, for while we have fortunate and unfortunate days we have more fortunate and unfortunate hours. I am very sorry that this lady does not know the hour of her birth, for it is possible that she could have become our next mayor, because I find that the Sun when powerful at birth, sharpens the will and makes a person very bright and successful.

LONG LIFE.

In this horoscope, the Sun is in the sign of his fall or humiliation, but in conjunction with Jupiter and the Ascendant, and therefore the horoscope would bring success, the acquisition of money, fame, prosperity, friends and assistance for their good health and long life.

The conjunction of the sun and Jupiter predisposes to apoplexy and this disease very often terminates a person's existence, and in a woman's horoscope shows an honorable and happy marriage, especially if Jupiter is strong.

But I notice that this lady is not married, and does not know the hour of birth or where the Sun was when she was born, which is a misfortune, and therefore the horoscope must be afflicted.

It is quite true, that when the Sun is in Aries, it is the sign of its full because it is opposite to its proper House and so resembles a man who has been turned out of doors, nevertheless, the conjunction of such a powerful planet as Jupiter, should have mitigated this great affliction but in our estimation, we are quite certain that this lady was not born at noon, the most powerful hour of the day, neither was she born at sunset, because at that hour the Sun and Jupiter would be both in her House of marriage, and she is not married.

WEAK AND STRONG.

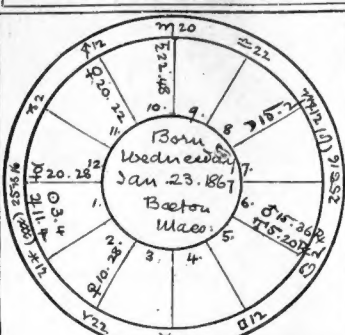

Miss Curtis is one of the weakest and again one of the strongest persons in the world, and she possesses wonderful possibilities, and one who is able to understand her own life, can concentrate her efforts.

At times she is somewhat fearful, but it can be outgrown; she is noble, honest, kind hearted, endowed with natural discrimination, is a fairly reader of character and not fairly deceived.

NOTED NEGRO WOMAN LEADER VISITS HUB

Miss Mary McLeod Bethune, president of the National Association of Colored Women's Clubs, is the guest today of the local chapter, and the official representative of 100,000 colored women in the country. She is the founder and dean of the Industrial School for Colored Girls in Daytona, Fla., and it is in the interests of this organization that she is touring New England. While here she is entertained by the Massachusetts State Union of Women's Clubs and Mrs. Dora O. Johnson of the Boston Club. A dinner will be given in her honor tonight at the Women's Service Club, which she will go to New York to address the Rockefeller Foundation Society.

PLANETS VAGUE IN HOROSCOPE

FRANCES G. CURTIS

Mrs. Catherine Howard, astrologist, baffled in complete forecast because Miss Frances G. Curtis does not know hour of her birth. The prophecies, however, miss Curtis is an able woman and a go-getter.

Mercury in Capricorn, and rules the intellect, as when she also learns to think she does not easily forget it.

I noticed also, that the Moon affects Venus and that affects her success, but the Moon is in a sign of aspect to Mars and that makes her courageous and active, she hates idleness and idleness. It also makes her firm and very successful in dealing with others, and greatly strengthens her health and constitution.

If she was born in the afternoon instead of the morning, then the Moon is bestowed in a very good aspect of Saturn, and will make her patient and persevering, which leads to success and the acquisition of wealth. It also makes her prudent and industrious, and could do well in real estate matters.

SECOND ROUND.

At this particular time, Saturn is passing through Leo, and will have completed his second round in his life at Christmas, when he does one door and opens the third and last door, and in February, April and October, 1925, afflicts her progressed Jupiter, and she is very much disturbed, and if any one owes her any money, she is not likely to get it easily.

The year 1927, will prove most satisfactory than 1925, and at this particular time, I notice that Jupiter will pass over her natal Mercury the end of November, 1925, and makes a good aspect with Saturn at the same time, but that alone cannot effect her.

I also notice, that this month, Herschel is making an aspect of perfect friendship to Saturn, but is repelled by the other planets, and is not yet so far towards into the New Year, so we cannot find anything that would warrant her going ahead, in this particular race.

Had she consulted me, I would have begged her to 'roof her sails and lay low,' and not do anything with natural discrimination, as it is fairly reader of character and not fairly deceived.

WAS ASIA TOO $300 TO TRAP VACCARO

Testimony that Charles Nasiat, until recently a federal narcotic agent, received $300 from Attorney John J. Connel in the latter's office in the Tremont Building, for the purpose of obtaining a position as federal narcotic agent for Sarro Vaccaro, a government narcotic inspector and reformed drug peddler, was presented to a jury in the U. S. District Court today.

Nasiat in his testimony claimed he accepted the money in an attempt to get Vaccaro, who he charged with selling the drug trade.

The State contends Nasiat told Connel he has influence in Washington and for the sum involved could obtain a position for Vaccaro, who is a client of Connel.

JAIL TERMS FOR PAIR WHO BALK AT MARTYRDOM

Neither neither Stephen Sparrow nor his wife, Anastasia, would take a year's sentence for the family, Judge Arthur P. Stone in East Cambridge District Court today sentenced each of the couple with six months.

Mr. and Mrs. Sparrow were arrested when it came up Judge Stone looked hopefully at Mr. and Mrs. Sparrow. But there was no hope, so the judge, being strictly impartial, sentenced both. Appeals were entered in each case.

They were taken this court, where Judge Stone decided both were guilty of fraud, but owing to lack of evidence he offered to let one of the couple off provided the other would serve a year.

Neither of the couple would agree to sacrifice himself or herself, and the case was continued until October 13.

FALLS FROM 11TH FLOOR

New York, Oct. 13 (A.P.)—Arthur Goodwin, 34, wealthy producer of Broadway, England, plunged to his death from the eleventh floor suite at the Hotel Roosevelt early today, his body crashing through the glass roof of the hotel restaurant.

There were no indications of suicide, and police believe Goodwin slipped and toppled over the window while all white railing the window. A number of hotel employees were closing the restaurant when Goodwin's body struck the glass roof, crashing through, and landed on one of the tables. Goodwin died while being rushed to a hospital.

Police are attempting to communicate with relatives in England.

"LITTLE ANNIE ROONEY" HIT AT LOEW'S ORPHEUM

If one may judge of the attitude of an audience in witnessing a showing of "Little Annie Rooney," the newest Mary Pickford classic, Mary is still the "World's Sweetheart." At Loew's Orpheum the audience gave unmistakable evidence that it still admired Miss Pickford's work. "Little Annie Rooney" is a comedy drama of tenement life in the lower East side of New York. The vaudeville was exceptionally good. There were six acts headed by "Town Topics," a song and dance revue presented by Alex Corber. This act is snappy and very entertaining. Cliff Navarro with Bob Gersbach also gave fine amusement.

Washington, Oct. 13 (A.P.)—Probably the greatest concentration of air force the capital has ever seen was ordered by the War Department for a flight demonstration today over the Lincoln Memorial.

The force in composed of the 45 planes that have been conducting maneuvers at Mitchell Field, L. I., in connection with the air race there. After their demonstration here the planes were under orders to fly to Langley Field, Va.

Mitchell Field, Oct. 13 (A.P.)—Eleven planes of the second bomb group left Mitchell Field today for Bolling Field, Washington, from where they will fly to the Lincoln Memorial for the War Department's flight demonstration.

Lieutenant G. W. Goddard, flying over New York in a specially built observation plane, took a picture of the central part of the city. The photograph was to be developed in the air during the flight to Washington and dropped by parachute to President Coolidge on the White House lawn.

EXACTLY LIKE A PORTRAIT IN OILS, a pictured lady of the Movement, was Mrs. Joseph W. Woods, a stunning bride who walked up the aisle of St. John's church, Gloucester, as Miss Priscilla Pollard. A slender, statuesque figure, she, in rich deep blue velvet, oyster white and gleaming and extremely becoming to her vivid dark coloring.

OF THE STRAIGHTEST, SIMPLEST lines was the gown, with long fingered sleeves and graceful folds, while the misty tulle veil floated above, headed with a fillet of pearls. A cluster of lilies were the chosen flowers, rounding out perfectly the picture itself.

USUALLY SATISFIED to look upon, too, were the bride attendants—four in all—Misses Anna P. Bortwell, Jonathan B. Hammond and William A. P. Stride (these three sisters of the bride), and Elizabeth Stewart, daughter of the Charles Stewart, the last named in the bride's role.

THEY WORE VERY fetching bouffant frocks of soft gray taffeta with meshes of taffeta lined with dahlia yellow velvet and tied in large easy bows. For elegance a small, rubber shoe model with tiny veils depending from the brims were chosen, and the gray and gold color scheme carried further in tiny round taffeta muffs caught with golden yellow daisies.

ALVIN F. BORTWELL, brother-in-law of the bride, gave her in marriage at the altar, and another brother-in-law, the Rev. William A. P. Stride, read the marriage vows before a smart company, including Mrs. and Mrs. Thomas La Farge, the latter of New York.

MRS. WOODS STAFF was a cosmopolitan set of young men, well set and well versed in such duties. Norman R. Strigley, his brother-in-law, was best man and in the other end were Norman R. Strigley, Jr., Howard Tuckerman, Jr., Jonathan B. Hammond and Thomas La Farge, the latter of New York.

ALSO JOHN CHURCHILL, son of the author, Winston Churchill, Rector R. Fox, Jr., a New Yorker and Phoebe Wagner, who hails from Philadelphia. The bride and groom sail abroad tomorrow for some five weeks of travel and then set up their home in Boston's young married set, which is a matter of much joy to their friends hereabouts.

'THE BAD MAN' AT COPLEY

With the proverbial spice of variety, the Copley Theatre players temporarily abandon European locale this week and take a long leap to Arizona to reproduce Fort Emerson Brown's breezy comedy, "The Bad Man."

Alan Mowbray as the swashbuckling Quincey Hannon, Peaches Keane, repeated the success of last season in this same role and added bright lustre to a character that shines with humor.

As in the case with good comedies, actors come in for a big share of the merit and the oblique hand of delivery some sharp thrusts into his gallery at the divorce law and his heart that when in New York he "broke the whole Ten Cent magazine in one day" with impunity.

Equally true is his idea of employing a "double" to fill peremptory a trick, as he says, borrowed from the movies.

Barring the occasional too obvious English inflection of their voices, the winners to have been well played, especially those of Miss Stranding and Miss Campbell of the contemptible Peil. However, the evening was all Mr. Mowbray's and he deserved his repeated curtain calls.

KEITH-ALBEE BIDS FOR LOCAL QUARTETTES

An opportunity is being offered to local quartettes—any male quartet or mixed voice—to tour the B. F. Keith-Albee Circuit of theatres. This is to be accomplished by means of a National Quartet Contest, which will be held in the Keith-Albee theatres throughout the country and for this purpose the entire circuit has been divided into zones.

The New England zone includes Boston, Providence, Portland, Manchester and Lowell. Preliminary contests are to be held at each of the Keith theatres in these cities, the winners to be judged by the audiences and their choice sent to the Keith's Theatre, Boston, to compete for the championship of the New England zone.

Among those already entered in the competition are the Brooklyn City Quartet, Colonial Quartet, Imperial Quartet, the Heavens Quartet, the Four, the Harlow Quartet, Specialty Four and Uplink the Male Four.

BOSTON MUSICIANS TO AUGMENT ORCHESTRA

Coming Events

Midway Blackman in "The Carillon" will take the stage at the Hollis next Monday.

"The Cracking Chair" will be the attraction at the Copley next week. "The King on Main Street" will be the opening feature at the new Metropolitan Theatre next Saturday.

"The Miracle" will come to the Boston Opera House for five weeks starting Wednesday, October 25.

Conducted the music for many Max Reinhardt productions in Europe and he was specially engaged by Mr. Niles to come to America to conduct the music for "The Miracle."

The score was written by Engelbert Humperdinck, composer of "Hansel and Gretel" and "Knecht Rupke," with additional music by Friedrich Schuler, but the credit for the inspiring interpretation is due Elmer Niles, the conductor, who pays his first visit to Boston.

UNITARIANS FOR EXTENSION

Cleveland, Oct. 13 (A.P.)—Absorption of the general Unitarian conference by the American Unitarian Association is to be completed at the biennial convention of the governing body of the Unitarian churches, which opened a three-day session here today.

The American Unitarian Association, meeting outside of Boston for the first time, inaugurates the second century of Unitarianism in America.

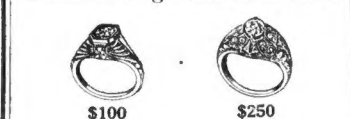

Steps also will be taken to extend liberal Christianity in America. A request to raise $150,000 to be known as the Unitarian fund for establishing new churches, adding new ones and financing other activities of Unitarianism was made. Alliance of Unitarian Young People's Union and other agencies will be considered.

He's a star football player!

We can't tell you his name. You've read it a hundred times. You've probably seen him play. He's the hero of every red-blooded young boy and old-boy in town. We're going to tell you a little secret about his training—He says "I always keep a Schrafft Bar handy. It's a scientific fact that pure sugar produces strength. A Schrafft Bar is a great vitalizer." We don't all play football—but we all love good candy.

Diamond Rings-Unusual in Value

Two new designs in diamond rings, the diamonds are of fine color and perfect. The one priced $100 is mounted in 18k white gold. The other at $250 is of platinum set with small diamonds.

These rings are unusually good value and typical of the fact that for diamond rings of the better quality, none are to be found lower in price than those shown by Smith Patterson Company.

ROMANCE OF THE SEA Attraction at State

The unusually fine photographs gave the audience at Loew's State Theatre much to enthuse over. The principal attraction was Ramon Novarro in "The Midshipman." The second offering was "The Circle," with Eleanor Boardman and Malcolm McGregor in the featured roles.

"The Midshipman" is the film which was made with the cooperation of the United States Navy at Annapolis. All the lure and romance of the sea is in this film in life at this great school. And not the least interesting part of the picture is the participation of the United States cadets at the Academy.

"The Circle" is a picture of a young man's life in the navy. It is a fascinating tale of a wife who craved romance and happiness even more than the offering of wealth, security and position.

"LAZYBONES" DRAMA OF MAINE RURAL LIFE "Lazybones" a drama in three acts by Owen Davis, was presented last night by the Bostonville Theatre Players. "Lazybones" is the story of a young man's life in the village of Maine. The young man's attitude toward life is the just and good-natured derision of the community. An indignant mother acknowledges his feelings, but insists on defending this "young lightning" from criticism.

Arthur Chatterton as Lazybones, gave a remarkable performance and the audience responded to his efforts with well merited applause. Miss Margery Foster played a fascinating innocent cause of all the scandal. Mrs. George A. Hibbard also gave a fine account of herself.

IRENE FRANKLIN IS FEATURE AT KEITH'S

Irene Franklin is a feature star of an excellent bill presented at Keith's this week. The comedienne returned to Boston with a big of new songs and the initial audience received her with open arms. She was escorted again and again. Jerry Jannigan accompanied her at the piano.

Margaret Rossini, operatic star, was also a favorite, and her rendering of operatic and musical comedy selections was a delight to listen to.

Law Marshall and Mildred May gave a very clever exhibition of novelty dancing. The rest of the bill was also very entertaining.

FULLER HONORS AGED WOMAN AT REVIEW

Finds Her Trying to See Parade; Takes Her to the Official Balcony

"The Governor's Lady"—no dashing debutante nor stately young maiden was she, but a little, bent, great-grandmother, Mrs. G. J. Barker, 82 years old, of No. 41 Everett street, Everett, was accorded the place of honor at the State House by Governor Alvan T. Fuller.

This was the first time the cheer in the brilliant Columbus Day parade.

The blue of bustle and tramp of marching feet echoed in the State House corridors. A timid, white haired old lady approached a kindly faced gentleman and plucked him by the sleeve.

The Old Lady: "Is there a place, sir, do you suppose, where I could see the parade?"

ON GOVERNOR'S BALCONY.
The Governor: "A place for you?
There is and always will be as long as I am Governor. Come with me and we will find it."

And His Excellency, the old lady's small hand tucked under his arm, escorted Great-grandmother Barker to a place of honor on the Governor's balcony, where she smiled and leaved as the brilliant parade of bands, floats and uniformed ranks went past.

"But this is the first time I've ever seen one from a balcony, and from a Governor's balcony at that. Isn't he a kind gentleman? God bless him,
I hope he lives to see many more parades, he was so good to an old lady like me."

CUP IN BRIMMING.
But His Excellency's good deed for the day was not complete. He sent his executive secretary, Ernest Ricker, with a crisp ten-dollar bill to buy her old hand and the great-grandmother, her cup of joy brimming over, went on her homeward way rejoicing.

The Governor's guest came to Boston in 1861 direct from Burlington, Warwickshire, England, she stated.
She has two daughters, eight grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren. This was the forty-first parade she had attended in the last forty years.

"Governor's Lady"

Mrs. G. J. Barker, 82-year-old great grandmother, of Everett, whom Governor
Fuller found trying to see parade, then escorted her to Governor's balcony at State House.

LOSES DORIES IN BLOW

Her dories all gone and with dock fittings wrecked, the fishing schooner
Catherine of Gloucester, Captain
Archie McLeod, arrived at the South
Boston fish pier today.

Captain McLeod reported one of the worst experiences in his career in weathering the storm of last week, declaring the blow was as heavy as any to be expected in midwinter.

The wind, which was blowing strongly from the southwest, shifted suddenly to the northeast, he said, and attained a velocity of 70 miles an hour, causing him to lay to off Halifax.

Nevertheless the Catherine brought in a cargo of 37,000 pounds of halibut and 27,000 pounds of sail fish.

TURTLE SHIP IS BECALMED

A whole lot of live turtles becalmed and without fresh water was succeeded by the United Fruit liner San Gil in the Gulf of Mexico on October 1. Properly, it might be mentioned, said turtles were aboard the schooner Mary L. Harty, a Ponchartraine craft, which was transporting them from Mosquito Cove to Key West that they might be served to turtle loving Floridians.

The San Gil, in with a large cargo of bananas reported sighting the Harty adrift with distress signals singing. The steamer went along side. For several days there hadn't been a whisper of wind. Fresh water had been consumed in huge quantities and the barrels of the Harty were dry.

Four huge breakers of water were seen in the distance and transferred to the Harty.

GIRLS FOUND UNCONSCIOUS IN CAMBRIDGE

Was Lying on Second-Story Floor of the Police Building

Lying in the second floor corridor of the police building at Brattle square, Cambridge, the unconscious body of Maude Hilder of Boston street, Cambridge, was found today by an officer from the Brattle square police station, who chanced to pass through the corridor.

The girl was taken to the Municipal Hospital, where she is being held for observation.

That she was a member of the Girl Scouts, who have their headquarters on the floor above the Brattle square station in the police building, was ascertained when a Girl Scout was found on her finger.

It is believed that she was going into the Scout headquarters, when she was stricken by a fainting spell, and fell to the floor unconscious. How long she was lying there is not known, as she was not seen entering.

For a time, the matter looked like a mystery, as no means of identification were found on her clothing, but the police were puzzled, but when she recovered consciousness at the hospital, she made known her identity.

Physician at the hospital advanced the opinion that her condition was not serious.

HALF-MILLION IN MAIL LOOT AND 5 THUGS TAKEN
Los Angeles, Oct. 12 (A.P.)—Nearly all of the half-million dollar loot of registered mail taken by thugs in a mail truck holdup here Thursday was back in the postoffice today and behind bars were five alleged thugs. Detectives found what they believed was the headquarters of the gang in a garage near San Pedro Harbor. Under the floor they found part of the plunder and in a metal fire they dug up a metal box containing most of the remainder. All together they recovered $5,000 in cash, $148,000 in negotiable bonds, $200,000 in American Bankers' Association checks and about forty platinum watches.

BOY SLAYER, 15, LAYS HIS CRIME TO DRINK
Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 12 (A.P.)—Fifteen-year-old Joseph Borowski, confined to a cell in the county jail awaiting sentence for the murder of Walter Kowalski, 29, today attributed his crime to liquor. "I had been drinking with some friends," he boy declared. He pleaded guilty to a second degree murder charge. Sentence will be imposed Friday. It being the first in Criminal Court history here that a boy of Borowski's age paid the penalty for murder.

CEMETERY ASSOCIATION IS AWARDED $19,000
The Forest Hills Cemetery Association was awarded today by Mayor Curley $19,000 for the taking of 90,400 square feet of land in the city with the widening of Morton street, Dorchester.

The Mayor also authorized the Public Works Department to expend $20,000 for the same purpose, the average system through the same street.

CHARLESTOWN MAN EATS MEAL, THEN FALLS DEAD
Joseph Shortell, sixty-four, of No. 260 Main street, Charlestown, was pronounced dead on arrival at the Haymarket Square Relief Hospital today, following a sudden illness at a Charlestown restaurant. Shortell went into the restaurant at No. 215 Main street and ordered port, champagne and coffee. After partaking of the meal, he became suddenly ill and fell to the floor.

He's An Optimist

Dante Bacci, veteran of the World War, 18 times operated upon, has a watch chain made from one of the pieces of steel that punctured him.

PUNCTURED VET LONGS TO SEE DYING MOTHER
Dante Bacci, veteran of six World War battles, is the wonder of the medical world today. He has undergone sixteen surgical operations for the removal of several pounds of bullets, lead and shrapnel.

With his body scarred and broken from a series of operations, Bacci is an inspiration to his "buddies" at the U. S. Veterans' Hospital in Westborough.

For four years he carried three twelve bullet holes in his skull. Bacci says he: "I know my body can never be made over and that life cannot hold much for me, but I try to be happy. Were I to wish I was young like I was before I went to fight, it would be only to take a last trip to Italy to my aged mother, who is dying."

Bacci came to Boston more than thirty years ago. Two years later he became an American citizen. When war broke out Bacci was one of the first to go in the 1st Division. Bacci's first month pension is $100 a month. He has been without support since his daughter, an army nurse, gave her life to her country in 1918.

ridicals" and "really intelligent, delightful people." The "upper classes" would make many interesting discoveries, if they could go up a little higher in the social scale and investigate those that do the work.

They would even find, to their surprise, that many of the upper classes descend from the laboring class.

BE CAREFUL about little things. Raymond Brett, called the strongest man in Germany, bent iron bars with his hands, tore horseshoes apart, held two horses pulling against each other. He scratched himself with his nail; blood poison developed; he's dead. The germs too small to be seen with a microscope are stronger than any man. Such germs are usually on the hands.

EXTREME RADICALS among French workers organize a twenty-four-hour strike, "the protest of the proletariat against the war in Morocco."

French workers, however, possess a knowledge of public affairs and of history, sometimes lacking in this country.

It doesn't take a great deal of knowledge to realize that a class, proletarian or capitalist, that fails to support its nation in war will regret its foolishness.

CONVENTION RAPE CONNECTICUT GOVERNOR FOR AIDING THREAT COMPANY IN THE STRIKE
Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 12 (A.P.)—A shorter working day, with the object of distributing available employment among the largest possible number of workers, was advocated in a resolution adopted by the American Federation of Labor convention here today.

The very existence of labor depends upon shorter hours," the resolution stated. "With modern methods of production, such as power machinery, and the rapidly increasing number of workers, the working day must be shortened or more production will be produced than the world can consume, and vast numbers of workers thrown out of employment."

The American Threading Company of Willimantic, Conn., a subsidiary of the English Sewing Cotton Thread Company (Manchester, England), was criticized in a resolution which charged the company has made large profits but seeks to reduce wages 10 per cent.

Governor Trumbull of Connecticut was criticized for his method of handling the strike situation in Willimantic.

Kennett Rawson's Loyalty Keeps Him With MacMillan Ship Till She's Unloaded

Wiscasset, Me., Oct. 12 (A.P.)—Some insight into the spirit of loyalty of the members of the MacMillan Arctic Expedition was given by the action of Kennett Rawson, the youngest member of the party, whose father, P. H. Rawson, president of a Chicago bank, was here to meet his son when the Bowdoin and Peary arrived yesterday.

His father brought a party of twenty in two private cars, the Federal and the National. He had planned to leave last night with his son, but the fifteen-year-old boy demurred, pointing out that he was in duty bound to remain with the Bowdoin until she was unloaded and ready to sail for Winter quarters at Southport.

His father admitted this view was correct and dispatched one of the cars with a part of his party. He is remaining over until Kennett, who has learned that loyalty without which MacMillan would never have journeyed in this Arctic exploration, has completed his duties on the Bowdoin.

COSTS HER $50 TO BE CAPD FOR NSANE
Northampton, Oct. 12 (A.P.)—Miss Lois McLaughlin, attendant at the State Hospital for the Insane, was fined $50 in district court today for allowing insane persons to escape.

Ribbel Poirier and Evelyn Jones, both of Springfield, are alleged to have been allowed their freedom by Miss McLaughlin and the Poirier girl married during her week of freedom to John DeCoursey at Hartford, Ct.

DeCoursey and the girl's mother are awaiting action in Springfield for securing an escaped insane person.

The Adventures of a Love Letter

THE LOVE-LETTER GETS ITS FIRST SAT-BACK

ALL THE WORLD LOVES A LOVER

THE YOUNG WHIPPER-SNAPPER THE MOTHER-HAZARD.

IT ENDURES THE EAGLE-EYE OF SMALL BROTHER

AND REACHES ITS HEAVEN AT LAST!

"I started in the small flat of a small boy with a good crop of pale brown freckles on his nose, a reckless cap, one 'snicker' that had gotten tired of holding its end up, and had just let down and become a neat-down—and an honest heart. His trouble was just that he could not tear himself away from certain terribly wonderful boys that had a power peculiarly potent on the Will-to-Go-Strait-There-And-Back-of little boys. So he procrastinated.

And the letter... in his small flat beside an open mahogany wheezy from hasty men thrust their heads and shouted to others on the street, at one o'clock; and it stayed there until four! It was marked in an ardent splash of black ink, "RUSH!" Next it was given into the hands of a faithful doorman of color in an ultramarine blue uniform dashed with gold braid and gold buttons. It was beginning to develop a little color now itself, the letter was a color of pale-grey, slightly mottled with a steeling of finger prints.

And here it lingered another while, while the gentleman in the suit of ultra-marine blue held it tenderly and exclaimed in sympathy—for was he not beginning to know these envelopes, this writing? He clucked his tongue and speculated. And with him gazed in delicious awe the green-eyed boy, the steady boy and the dog of the house. And tried to see through the envelope! Next it visited for a moment in the excited, fluttering hand of a little maid, adroitly knowing to a word almost what there MUST be within. Here it was turned over and over, and rustled, and quivered at one "ab-b-b-b" over, held in the light with bated breath for the glimpse of but one wonderful word.

And then Mother got it! And for the very first time the poor letter was in real danger of being read and made to give up its poor little words, and its journey in the wastebasket, without ever having felt the bright gaze of the lady whose heart it was winged to. But "Mom" muttered "the young whipper-snapper," and passed it on. And it fell into awful peril. The hands, no less, of a mocking, impudent, pampered vandal—the lady's young brother. And the air was thick with schemes from then on. The letter was ransomed, the price made heavy for its delivery intact. In port at last, under the twin light-houses of her eyes, it spent the rest of its days in a carved painted box on the top of a lady's dresser.—NELL BRINKLEY.

PIMPERNEL AND ROSEMARY

She set quite placidly, as she always did close to her husband's chair watching her Philip—her soul in her eyes. She was smiling, and now and then she turned to say a word or two to Maurice, but to Rosemary she still looked preoccupied, and once she caught Eliza's large kind eyes fixed upon her with a curious, scrutinizing gaze.

An hour later when Rosemary was in her room and beginning to undress, there was a knock at her door, and Eliza came in.

After the Truth.

"May I come in for a moment, darling?" Eliza asked. Rosemary made her comfortable on the sofa, and set down beside her. Eliza took hold of both her hands and fondled them, stroking them up and down, and she began talking about Philip and Anna, and the dancing and the plans for future parties, and poodles and so on. Rosemary let her prattle on. They discussed the coming dinner-party, talked about Anna's future, and made some remarks about Peter.

This brought the main subject on the tapis.

"Where did you and Peter first see that sport?" Eliza asked presently.

"He was hiding in the shrubbery," Rosemary replied. "I didn't see him. Peter saw him and pounced upon him, and dragged him out on to the path."

"Peter he did not just go to the service door and ask for me, wasn't it?"

"That's what Peter thought. I am afraid he treated the poor wretch rather roughly."

"I am sorry he did that," Eliza mused, and thoughtfully stroked Rosemary's slender fingers between her own. "The man really had a message for me."

"I know," Rosemary rejoined; "a letter."

"No, it wasn't a letter," Eliza said, and looked Rosemary now straight between the eyes. "You know these gipsies are queer people. They have curious gifts of divination and prophecy. This man—she seemed to hesitate, her glance mechanically stroking Rosemary's hands. "But the man had a letter for you, Eliza dear," Rosemary invited. "I saw it in his hand."

"Oh, that was only a blind. He told me that he had come all the way from Uljak to speak with me. Uljak is where I was born, and my dear brother and Peter's mother. My sister-in-law lives there, little Anna was born there, and little Marie."

"Death is near"

"Well, and what did he have to tell you?" Rosemary asked.

"That he had had a vision. My father had appeared before him in a dream, and told him that he must start at once and seek me. He was to tell me that he whom I love best in all the world is in immediate danger of death."

"He said that the stranger now within our gates knows of this danger, and would confirm what he said. Well, my darling, I only need look at your sweet face to see that the miserable wretch spoke the truth. I saw your look when I told you what he said, and it is from you that I want the truth. What is the danger that threatens Philip?"

"Eliza, darling—" Rosemary murmured.

"I am his mother, you know," Eliza interposed, with her gentle, quiet smile. "I must know. He is all the world to me. And as soon as you know that something threatens him, you should have told me, my darling."

Then, as Rosemary was still fighting with herself, alternately praying to God for guidance, and striving to swallow the fears that were choking her, Eliza went on quite quietly:

"It is difficult for you, of course," she said, and patted Rosemary's cheek like an indulgent mother, but it would have been better to tell me at first."

"Well, now tell me all about it. Philip's release and Anna's is only temporary. Is that it?"

Rosemary nodded. She could not trust herself to speak.

"That is the charge against them?"

"Philip wrote certain newspaper articles," Rosemary replied. "He has appeared in the English and American press. Anna used to send those through in the parcels she packed up in Balgo's shop."

"Don't Lie to Me"

"I know about those articles," Eliza rejoined simply. "Everybody in Transylvania knew about them. But I did not guess that it means anything to do with them, or Anna. Then," she went on with a little catch in her throat, "it means a charge of treason against the State?"

"Yes."

"Military tribunal?"

"And—if they are found guilty—a sentence of death?"

"Not that," Eliza and Rosemary was on her knees with her arms round Eliza's shoulders, her tear-stained face turned up to her, protesting vigorously, that which she knew was false.

But Eliza's big, round eyes were barren, she looked a little wildly perhaps, but quite kindly into the beautiful face that expressed such a world of love and sympathy.

"Well now, my dear," she asked,

very quietly, "all this being so, why did I not tell those children come home at all? Why should he go now their trial, then—their purchase money's head fell upon her breast.

"I don't know," she murmured.

But Eliza put her finger under Rosemary's chin and forced her to look up.

"Don't be so, darling," she pleaded softly, "tell me the truth."

"I have to do you the truth, Eliza,"

Rosemary protested through her tears.

"Then I must believe you if you say so. And yet it is all very unpleasant. Why a cold. Nothing what? Why should she play with those poor children, like a cat does with a mouse? You know, Rosemary darling, what the gipsy said

was true."

Rosemary shook her head.

"He said that the stranger within the gates had the power to save my son from death. I have you that power, Rosemary?"

"Not that," Rosemary protested wildly. "If it were in my power,

don't you think that I would do anything in the world to save Philip's

Anna?"

Eliza nodded.

"Yes, dear," she said gently. "I would do it. I would do it. I would do it. I would do it. I would do it.

Then suddenly she took Eliza's face between her two hands, and looked at almost feverishly. "I see,

now, as if she would weep a tear from the depths of the younger woman's soul."

"Swear to me, Rosemary," she said, and her gentle voice sounded caustic and harsh. "Swear to me that there is nothing in the world that you can do to save Philip.

Rosemary, returning Eliza's fixed

gaze, replied steadily:

"What to Do"

"I swear to you that it is not in my power to save Philip and Anna.

If it were, I would do it."

Even then Eliza did not cry. She just sat there quite still, her big round eyes quite dry, her mouth

without a quiver.

"And so we can do nothing," she said, with a note of finality in her voice.

"Don't say that, dear," Rosemary protested. "Treat as a matter of fact, has gone to Bucharest to try and see the King personally."

"That he may be the meaning of the word 'home' is to me," Rosemary said steadily, and struggled to her feet. "We are not going to let him go. You talk about your stipend being the gift of prophecy. Well,

Philip and Anna are in God's hands,

and you and I are able to pray so hard and so resolutely that God will help us, I am sure. I know,"

she added firmly.

Eliza gave a short, quick sigh.

She rose, and with the same gentle gentleness which she always showed to Rosemary, she found the girl in her loving arms.

"Good night, my dear," she said quietly. "I cannot not to have kept you up so late."

Good night dear. I say for us."

Eliza gave a tenderly.

After that she escorted her as far as her room, and at the door she kissed her once more.

DAILY SHORT STORY

JOAN felt her heart take a sudden downward trip as she saw the real stop with a jerk at the door and a stout elderly lady come in. Joan was a small, fat, de-finitely and definitely came to the conclusion, "Somebody has told her—now she's come pell-mell to spoil everything. Think I need a cheap one, somebody with better ears than old Aunt Mattie."

Joan walked to the front door with her head in the air.

"Joan! she was another in a tremendous embrace. "My dear, I came right away, called off my dog and notified my bridge club."

Like a Steam Roller

"For goodness sake, sit down and get your breath, you're peering like a steamroller!" Joan backed away, "since you've heard all about it, may we not have to go over it all?"

"But my dear child, I never knew you were here. I thought the house was closed up and you on your way to the White Mountains and—"

"Sit down," ordered Joan. "I was on my way but I forgot my coat and came back. Old Aunt Mattie was acting as care taker so I decided to spend the night and start in the morning again. Well, then, that awful storm came and I heard a terrible noise. I flew into some clothes and—"

"Imagine, right in the next field as I'm sitting on a bit of a sofa, a man came staggering toward me—Lieutenant Graves, his name is, and somehow I got him into the house. He said he had engine trouble and had to land and make a poor job of it and then fainted dead away."

"Aunt Mattie got him to bed and he called a doctor. He's been here a week and is almost well, so everything is quite all right and you really should not have troubled to come, Aunt Daisy."

Ready To Cry

"Quite all right!" Aunt Daisy looked ready to cry. "What are hospitals for anyway? Why on earth did you take this man into your house and spoil your trip? Here without servants, half the house closed up—"

"I feared the worst as soon as I heard and now I know it's true. Soon as I saw you, Joan, I knew it was true."

"What was true?" asked Joan lightly, thinking hard how she could get Aunt Daisy on the twenty train back.

"That you're in love with him," whispered Aunt Daisy miserably.

Joan's face and throat turned a dreadful infernal red. "Why, such nonsense," she cried indignantly. "I'm in love with him, yes, but I don't love him."

"No," interrupted Joan quietly.

"With my money I could have all that I wanted, but I was thrashing for real love. I thought it was not given to me to love like this. I thought and oh, how bitterly, that rich girl was denied a big passionate, overwhelming love. I loved lots of times a little, but never like this—the life that I dreamed about. I believe he loves me a little and the possibility of it fills me with de-licious pain. I don't care if he is a mechanic! He ended with and des-ventures, I'm going to marry him if he asks me."

Aunt Daisy snatched a groan. "If he just were a mechanic—b-but he's an impulsive and a liar. I don't believe he's hurt a bit—just takes this opportunity to make love to the rich Miss Harrington, and when he's sure of her heart, then he'll confess his identity. You still love him and yet you admit he's a mechanic."

Joan's chin came out a little. "I believe in him," her eyes grew stern. "He said he was Lieutenant Graves and how can you prove that he isn't?" she finished triumphantly.

Aunt Daisy examined her platinum wrist-watch. "In fifteen minutes I will have you thoroughly convinced that this fortune-hunting mechanic is a fraud. He'll try you of your life as fast as he flew in."

"Are you crazy? Marry a car-taker's daughter?" Joan gasped a little, puffed.

"Oh, you don't have to come here to tell me that. I know she's only a caretaker's daughter but I love her as I've always dreamed I'd love some girl. I like her nerve, too, Ed, telling me she was Miss Harrington when I knew that young beardless was headed for the White Mountains. What is about made me love her! Of course I could see by her calloused hands who she was—but I'm going to marry her, if she'll have me, understand?"

Joan cocked her head on side and then nodded in suppressed laughter. Two minutes later with pink cheeks and sparkling eyes she knocked on the door and entered the convalescent jumped up and striding toward her took her hand in his.

"Joan," he nodded toward the newcomer who also came forward, "may I present my brother Ed, also Lieutenant Graves in the air service?"

So Glad

Joan blinked once or twice and then pulling herself together held out her hand with a sweet smile.

"So glad you came! I just stepped in to tell you that—"

"As you crazy? Marry a car-taker's daughter?" Joan gasped a little, puffed.

Governors Island Would Be an Ideal Airport

Officers and civilians who wrestled with the Long Island Railroad and the Nassau County jehus to get to the air races at Mitchell Field should take a look at a large scale map of New York—and then marvel.

They will find an ideal flying field at the very heart of that great metropolitan community. It is called Governors Island.

Then they should realize that the personal trouble and time they took to get to Hempstead or Mineola with every prospective passenger by air, every letter by air mail, every important shipment from the heart of the community must go through every time passenger or package needs to avail of the huge time saving of airplane transport.

It adds as an average two whole hours to the time of an air journey.

Were Governors Island an airport for New York City that two hours would be almost wiped out.

From Wall street you could step aboard an airplane at Governors Island in ten minutes. Fifteen minutes from City Hall, a half hour at the most from Times Square.

And why not?

Because this ideal airport, which would do so much for civilian aviation, is strangled in the same mass of red tape, buried beneath the same thick and beautiful layers of the moss of tradition, surrounded by such pleasant personal privileges as have hampered the development of aviation in this country in every way.

Governors Island is the headquarters of the Second Corps Area, United States Army, forsooth.

The finest flying terminal near any great city in the world is used to accommodate a major-general and his staff, with a few hundred troops and a few hundred prisoners.

The major-general would be better off elsewhere. The staff would be better off elsewhere. The troops would be better off elsewhere. And there is no reason in the world why military prisoners should be there anyway.

Except that Governors Island has been a military post for a century and a quarter. Except that the broad acres and tree-crowned knolls nestling in the very shadow of the miracle of Manhattan Island's lofty tip provides a paradise ground, a nine-hole golf course, a polo field—and an eyecore of unsightly war-time shreds to mar the beauty of the harbor.

The Merchants' Association estimated two years ago that Governors Island could be made into a flying field adequate to the city's needs for $26,000. In actual real estate it is worth probably several times $26,000,000. Yet when the Merchants' Association took the matter up with the War Department they got this mystic answer:

"I regret to inform you that available space and military needs will not permit such an activity on the island. Installation of the proposed field would not only necessitate removal of numerous post structures but would also isolate from each other important parts of the post and seriously interfere with communication between them."

"Moreover, the field would occupy practically all ground available for drill and RECREATION PURPOSES. Under these circumstances I do not feel that approval of the proposed installation would be warranted."

"Yours very truly,

"DWIGHT F. DAVIS,
"Acting Secretary of War."

Mr. Newly-Appointed Secretary of War, does President Coolidge's program for the economical development of aviation include the allocation of the world's finest city air terminal to the hay-foot straw-foot of two or three hundred men and a polo field and stables for a major-general and his staff? Does President Coolidge approve the use of $100,000,000 or more of real estate for such purposes?

Not So Fast!

If You ARE Let in for Pacific Propaganda, DON'T Fall for the "Resolutions"

Can anybody who wishes appear before your club, your home circle or your school organization, and deliver a speech on his pet hobby?

Is your club, circle or other organization going to adopt resolutions, at the suggestion of these enthusiasts?

A warning against the pacifist dreamer who "desires a hearing" was delivered to the Maine Daughters of the Revolution at their meeting in Augusta by Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president-general of the National Daughters.

"Almost invariably you will find that you have let yourself in for an eloquent skillful propagandist who will presently sweep you off your feet into passing a resolution stressing some specific plan for your good common sense warns you against."

"Do not be afraid to ask for time to think it over, when it comes to deciding a question which involves declaring your opinion on a subject touching problem of far-reaching importance."

The president-general of the Daughters says the women should see to it that public school boards do not permit the schools to be used as vehicles for the dissemination of propaganda which, "in the guise of so-called 'peace' literature, is in reality dangerous and pacifist propaganda."

By means of widely distributed "disarmament" pamphlets, posters, placards and competitive prize essays, Mrs. Cook declares "concerted efforts are being made to disparage the traditional teaching of patriotism in the schools of our nation."

If WE know Maine, this word of caution from the leader of the National Daughters of the American Revolution will be all that is necessary. Pacific preachers posing as spokes of peace, if hereafter they desire to be heard in Maine, must "hire a hall."

But the advice is just as good for the women of New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

Beware of the smooth lady or the polished gentleman whose persuasion is followed immediately by the offering of "resolutions."

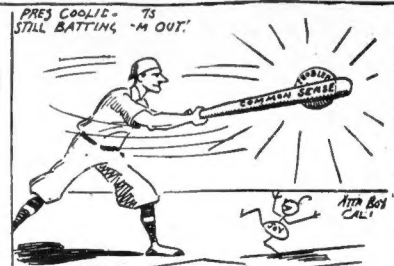

Take your time.

EVOLUTION IN FACT AND IN NAME

By Garrett P. Serviss Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

THE word evolution has a definite significance. It is one of those manufactured words based on Latin roots which, like the Latin "ratio," in its own language, are hard to use. Whenever you meet someone trying to "put over" a pseudo "science," or purposely to obscure any subject, you will find common phrases words flitting about amidst the mental clouds like bits in the twilight. Interest.

It is the heart of truth alone that gives the heart of the truth. And it is perfectly capable of expressing all that science knows or is likely to know.

But, to return to evolution. I have been reading in Science an article by Professor G. F. Hull of Dartmouth College, taking exception to Dr. H. F. Osborn's recent statement that "in chemistry and physics the evolution of the chemical elements has recently been demonstrated."

Professor Hull points out that such a statement is not justified if we take the word evolution in the sense in which it is ordinarily used in radioactivity it is true that we see transformations going on by means of which a complex atom breaks down and changes over into a simpler one. But all of these changes, says Professor Hull, are associated with degeneration. "We have no evidence whatever for the opposite process, the building up from simple to complex, and we have no evidence whatever that the atoms of chemical elements have by slow accretions acquired their present structure and characteristics."

The sentence quoted above from Professor Hull describes what evolution, in its accepted scientific sense, means, and what should always be in the minds of those who talk about evolution, if they wish to use such and secure accuracy and definiteness.

Pain Enough.

However, Dr. Osborn really meant some plain enough. Evidently it was that the spontaneous changes taking place through radioactivity, and other chemical phenomena, with regard to the direction of such changes, indicate the universal tendency in nature to a limitation of form and structure, and so testify in favor of evolution as an expression of a general law in accordance with which the universe and all that it contains have been brought into existence and are still governed.

What offends the "fundamentalist" is simply the assertion that man himself, at least as a physical being, is no exception to this law and that his earthly career has not been a degeneration.

Love As a Pastime

To the Friend of the People:
A friend of mine in Boston sent me an article in your paper which interested me. It just represented my own. It was about how some men make love to young women for a pastime, and then drop them. I have been fooled three times in my life in this way. I'm just sixteen years old and work fairly for my living. My friends say that I am very pretty. I have often trusted men who take me to shows, movies and fairs.

They pretend that they are fond of me, but after a time the novelty wears off and they become forlorn.

I wonder if you have this type of men in Boston. We have a few down here. STELLA AYCOCK, Fort Worth, Texas.

Hard Boiled Non-Coms

To the Friend of the People:
For over two years I have been a private in the U. S. Army. I have got all that I expected and a little more.

The discipline and training of the Army are helpful as far as my physical development is concerned. It's the wearing of the non-com's uniform that I detest. There may be occasions for wearing it, but I don't want to wear it. I want to wear the uniform of a private in the U. S. Army. I have got all that I expected and a little more.

Boys Improving

To the Friend of the People:
That quotation in your paper from a popular speaker that boys in this generation are growing worse, is to my thinking unjust.

After I read it, I had a talk with a young man who has been running a boys' camp the summer.

He replied many people misunderstand boys. They do not get on the right side of them.

Boys are a man in the second state. When his energies are directed right he responds. Give him nothing to do to help him expand and he may fall into mischief. Boys today, in my opinion, are an improvement over the older generation.

Agred Couples

To the Friend of the People:
May I say tribute to the way which the Hebrews are giving their aged poor. You will see very few aged persons of that race in almshouses. Why? This race takes care of its aged, but to what will it put to shame other races.

The cost of living has pressed

'THE BREAD GIVERS,' A REAL NOVEL

By DR. FRANK CRANE

A NEW novel has appeared by Anzia Yezierska. This new novel is an event, for no less an authority than William Lyon Phelps classes it among the best novels of the season.

One does not have to read very far in it to see why Mr. Phelps thinks "The Bread Givers" is great. Its excellence is that it is real. It is not about any theories nor general ideas, but about actual facts and their relation to life.

The story is a depicting of the struggle of a poor Jewish girl from surroundings of misery and poverty out into the light of freedom. In a sense it is a story of all of us. For we are all engaged in a struggle to better our conditions. But this struggle becomes more apparent and more vivid when it is about those who come to us from the Old World and are hampered by the traditions and ideas of other ages.

The old father of the heroines thinks it is his business to read the Torah and that the women's business to wait on him. This is an old idea and one that is very hard to get out of the consciousness of the race.

To escape her degrading conditions the heroine leaves her home and secures an education for herself. This she does in the face of great disadvantages.

Genius has been called the ability for keeping on—the disposition to persist in spite of obstacles. Miss Yezierska has this kind of genius herself, for she has come up out of the deepest poverty into comparative affluence, and the story of the heroine of her novel is very largely autobiographical.

It is the story of the lives of many of those who attempt to escape from Old World trammels into the light and liberty of the New World.

Those who are engaged in the struggle for progress in its bitterest terms can find truth about their efforts properly delineated in this novel.

It is not a thriller or a mystery story, or anything of that sort, but it is a depiction of the realities of life by one who has been face to face with them.

It is a triumph of realism and one which we predict will add certainly to the author's fame.

Anzia Yezierska will be remembered as the woman who wanted so to write that in the midst of her poverty and deprivation she used the tops of boxes and barrels, and in her lack of knowledge of the English language she wrote down what she saw.

After all, good writing is about what we have seen ourselves.

SPEND YOUR ALL AND YOU WILL NEVER GET AHEAD

When you get some money which you had not expected do you immediately begin to think of buying something you have wanted for some time, or do you apply it on paying for your home?

The man who spends his money in his home, unexpected money is rare, just as rare as the man who saves the increase in salary.

And you have to show for an increased income is an increased living standard.

You know you should begin to save, but you think small amounts saved each week would amount to very little; so you do not trouble yourself to make self-denials necessary to savings account.

Yet you hold the opinion that at some future time you will have acquired enough money so you won't have to worry.

Year after year you have held to this false theory.

You earn more and you are in his home, unexpected money is rare, just as rare as the man who saves the increase in salary.

What are you going to do within the next ten years?
